Jeffrey Louden

SVP, Engineering at The Atlantic

Washington, D.C.
jeff@jefflouden.com
jefflouden.com

I build teams and things: engineering organizations that are diverse, inclusive, and kind, and that ship high-quality products quickly.

WORK

2025 – Now — The Atlantic
SVP, Engineering (2026 – Now) · VP, Engineering (2025 – 2026)
Lead The Atlantic's 30+ person Engineering and QA organization.

2022 – Now — Existential Engineering Company
Founder
Built Aureo, a studio gear and plugin catalog, and the open-source catalog behind it.

2021 – 2022 — TIME
VP, Software Engineering
Led TIME's 12-person core software engineering team and its technical strategy.

2020 — Lyft
Engineering Manager II, Memberships
Led the 10-person team behind Lyft Pink, Lyft's subscription. Started its core platform team and led integrations with Bikes, Scooters and Rentals and partnerships with Grubhub+ and Chase.

2015 – 2020 — The New York Times
Director of Technology, NYT Cooking
Led NYT Cooking's 25-person team and built the paywall behind its $20M subscription. Cooking won two Webbys and a James Beard Award. Founding member of the Women in Tech task force.

2014 – 2015 — Nest and Google
Senior Web Developer
Joined Nest just before Google acquired it, and stayed on at Google.

2013 — The New Yorker
Director of Engineering

2011 – 2013 — Obama for America
Lead Software Engineer, BarackObama.com

EDUCATION

2005 – 2007 — Berklee Online
Certificate, Music Technology and Production

2001 – 2005 — Florida State University
B.S., Information Studies